Gangs recruiting in city's west side

Rival groups.
Terror Squad and Crazy Cree preparing for turf war, source says

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

Two First Nations gangs in the city's west side could be gearing up for a turf war this spring, as groups known as the Terror Squad and the Crazy Cree are recruiting members on the streets of Saskatoon's Pleasant Hill and Riversdale neighbourhoods.

A source in the city's west side, who wants to remain anonymous, told Metro Saskatoon that in recent months a number of jumpings and beatings — rooted in intimidation — have been used in attempts to scare youth in the area into picking sides.

Sgt. Scott Joslin, who heads the Saskatoon Police Service's street-gang unit, explained that the Terror Squad is well known to the SPS and that their activity — along with the activity of other street gangs — is something they monitor closely.

"Any time there is a potential for violence, we're concerned about it. Our No. 1 goal is keeping the community safe," said Joslin. "There are rival groups that operate within Saskatoon. As the weather warms up, it does tend to have an increase in activity, just because people feel less compelled to be housebound."

He continued: "A lot of the time, when you're dealing with rival gangs, you're dealing with crimes of opportunity. They're walking in the same community, living down the block … and when they see each other, that's when the spark of violence may erupt."

Police are constantly working with the justice system and sources in the community, he said, to target well-known individuals in the gang world and to seek out the most active offenders.

"Very often, that certainly curbs their tendency towards violence," he added. "Because they understand if they're violent, if they're active within the gang lifestyle, that it's not going to be tolerated."

Chris Randall, director of the StreetForce Youth Centre on 20th Street, said the amount of gang activity he's seen in recent months is much higher than it has been in the past 10 years he has worked in the area.

"The kids that I work with down here … what always strikes me about them is they have the same goals and dreams kids anywhere have," said Randall.

"They have those same kinds of dreams but they don't have the same kinds of opportunities. So when the doors of opportunity are closed to them, a lot of the time the gang will come alongside of them and pressure them."

Son stabbed

Mother charged with attempted murder heads back to court

A 32-year-old Saskatoon woman accused of stabbing her six-year-old son will be back in court Tuesday.

The woman appeared Monday for a bail hearing, but a provincial court judge decided he would reserve his decision on whether the woman would be granted bail.

The woman, charged with attempted murder and aggravated assault, was arrested on March 28 after a custody issue involving two boys, aged six and 10, brought Saskatoon police to her home in the 400 block of 9th Street East. METRO

Brad Wall, most popular premier

Premier Wall was ranked Canada's most popular premier once again by Angus Reid Public Opinion, with an approval rating of 64 per cent.

Saskatchewan was the only province where a majority of constituents were satisfied with their premier's performance.

Wall pulled well ahead of his counterparts: The runner-up, David Alward of New Brunswick, had an approval rating of 41 per cent. Only two other premiers received a positive assessment from more than a third of their constituents: Manitoba's Greg Selinger, at 38 per cent, and Ontario's Kathleen Wynne at 36 per cent. METRO

Art gallery given $175,000 piece

Love Birds.
Mendel Art Gallery 'thrilled' with sculpture by artist Kim Adams

JANE CAULFIELD

The Mendel Art Gallery just got a whole lot of love from BMO Financial Group, which has gifted a pair of sculptures to the gallery's permanent collection.

The art piece, titled Love Birds, was presented to the gallery on Monday at the Western Development Museum, which will exhibit them until Sept. 2. At that time, they will be put in storage while the Mendel transitions to the Remai Art Gallery of Saskatchewan.

"We hope that when the Love Birds set up their nest at the Remai Art Gallery that they will become an enduring and fun reminder of our longstanding commitment to Saskatchewan," said John MacAulay, district vice-president for BMO Financial Group.

Valued at about $175,000, the sculptures were made by Canadian artist Kim Adams. He said the two pieces developed over a number of years.

"This work was sort of kicking around for about 10 years at my studio. Originally it was just one piece," said Adams. "Then I started cutting up these two vans, and (the sculptures) started growing a relationship with each other."

Lisa Baldissera, chief curator at the Mendel Art Gallery, said she "could not be more thrilled" with the gift.

"This represents one of the most major pieces of contemporary art in the Mendel Art Gallery's collection to date," said Baldissera.

The new Remai Art Gallery of Saskatchewan will begin undergoing construction in the coming months.

Canada-India nuclear deal boosts Sask.'s uranium-export potential

Federal Minister of Natural Resources Joe Oliver speaks at the Cameco corporate headquarters in Saskatoon on Monday. Trade. Wall says exports to India could triple over next 15 years

morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

Saskatchewan could reap billions of dollars in economic benefits from a new nuclear trade agreement between Canada and one of the world's fastest-growing economies.

Joe Oliver, federal minister of natural resources, was in Saskatoon on Monday to announce the signing of the Canada-India Nuclear Cooperation Agreement by both countries.

The agreement, when it takes effect, will allow Canadian nuclear companies to export controlled nuclear materials, technology and equipment to India for peaceful purposes.

"Because India is such a large consumer of energy, it's particularly important in the natural-resource sector," Oliver explained at Cameco's headquarters. "But more broadly than that, there's a great deal of science and technology and other areas that are relevant to our current trade and our potential trade."

The pact, said Premier Brad Wall, will mean billions in export sales for Cameco and other Saskatchewan-based uranium companies.

Wall added that the agreement will create jobs in the province, and noted these kinds of international deals will advance Saskatchewan's position as an energy provider in Asian-Pacific markets.

"This is the final step," said Wall. "Now we get to the real nitty-gritty where the I's are dotted and the T's are crossed, and export permits can be negotiated by companies and we can see the movement of Saskatchewan uranium into the market."

Oliver described the agreement as "a sign of confidence and a good, further step in the relationship between Canada and one of the largest, fastest-growing economies in the entire world."

Wall and Oliver said they're confident that the exported uranium will not end up in the wrong hands, as the agreement will be monitored under safeguards applied by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

More areas at risk of flooding, officials warn

A soggy flood forecast for Saskatchewan has gotten worse as a higher-than-normal snowpack lingers.

The Water Security Agency says even more areas of the province than first anticipated will likely see flooding, and it's forecasting above-normal or well-above-normal runoff in the entire southern half of Saskatchewan.

Areas where flooding is likely include Regina and Moose Jaw, stretching southeast to Weyburn, as well as Saskatoon to Prince Albert and west to North Battleford.

"Since we released the March forecast on March 11, a few things have changed," said Ken Cheveldayoff, minister responsible for the Saskatchewan Water Security Agency. "We have far more snow than normal in many areas.... As a result, the potential size of the runoff area and the risk of flooding has increased."

The problem is that there was more snow than normal last month in many areas, and the cold is hanging around.

"I wish to emphasize that areas with very high runoff have a real risk of flooding. The melt in eastern Saskatchewan is mostly waiting to happen and that is increasing the risk of a fast melt and higher flows. I urge people to look at the forecast and make the proper preparations for flooding," said Cheveldayoff.

Agency officials say there's an increased risk of a high flood peak if temperatures rise quickly and the snow melts fast.

The Saskatchewan government plans on paying close attention to runoff conditions and will provide regular forecasts and updates as spring continues to bloom.

Rutting fallout. City councillors get heated over snow removal

The heat generated by a debate surrounding residential snow clearing at city council on Monday could have melted the ruts.

After a presentation and update on current rut-shaving measures from community services manager Randy Grauer, many councillors bombarded administration with questions exploring options to best avoid rutting issues in the future.

Coun. Darren Hill said many of his constituents have indicated they would pay more in taxes if they knew this was going to provide them with a necessary service.

"I've heard loud and clear from the citizens that they don't mind a property-tax increase if they see value for that increase, particularly in snow and ice and the state of our roads," Hill said.

Echoing Hill's comments, Coun. Tiffany Paulsen told her colleagues that it is councillors' responsibility to fight for what constituents want.

"Every year we seem to be saying, 'It's an unusual winter,' and I don't think we have the luxury to hide behind that anymore," said Paulsen. "(This issue) is under-resourced and it needs better support from this group."

Councillors also requested information about vehicular damage claims made to the city since severe rutting has become a major issue.

City solicitor Patricia Warwick said Saskatoon received 18 claims in January and February and 28 in March, and so far it has received 95 claims in April.

The cost of the citywide rut-shaving has not yet been tallied, but it will be provided to council when that information becomes available.

PETA apologizes to musher for accusation

Oops. Iditarod dog racer says that the apology is 'weak'

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals has apologized to an Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race musher whose dog died at a checkpoint.

PETA last month accused Alaskan musher Paige Drobny of leaving her dog unattended and said she should be criminally prosecuted.

Drobny dropped a dog at a checkpoint with race officials but snow from a storm covered the dog and it died of asphyxiation.

California. Trial over lead-warning labels on baby food begins

A trial began on Monday in a lawsuit filed by an environmental group against the nation's largest baby-food makers aimed at forcing the companies to alert consumers that some products contain low amounts of lead.

The trial will help determine if the products must carry warning labels in California.

Gerber Products Co., Del Monte Foods, Beech-Nut Nutrition Corp., and many other makers of baby foods and juices are selling products containing lead at levels that require warning labels under California Proposition 65, the Environmental Law Foundation asserts in the suit.

Lawyers for the companies say the U.S. Food and Drug Administration tested products targeted in the lawsuit and decided levels were below the federal standards that require a warning. FDA tests on products named in the lawsuit also found lead levels "below FDA's current tolerable intake levels for lead."

Lead poisoning

More than 500,000 U.S. children are believed to have lead poisoning, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

- Old paint, contaminated drinking water and soil tainted by old leaded gasoline are the primary sources of lead exposure, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

But both sides in the case agree on one fact: Baby foods containing carrots, peaches, pears and sweet potatoes have some lead. Also covered by the suit are grape juice and fruit cocktail.

Lead exposure can damage a child's developing brain but overall, lead poisoning in the U.S. has declined since it was removed from paints and gasoline formula. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Research confirms it: Penis size does matter

Science has spoken and, yes, gentlemen, size does matter.

A newly published study by a University of Ottawa researcher has concluded penis length exerts a measurable sway on females evaluating potential sexual partners.

"We found that flaccid penis size had a significant influence on male attractiveness," concludes the study that was published Monday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Science.

"Males with a larger penis were rated relatively more attractive."

Biologist Brian Mautz said he came to the study through curiosity over the evolution of male genitalia. Compared to other male primates, human endowment is generous.

"This observation has generated suggestions by evolutionary biologists that the comparatively larger human penis evolved under premating sexual selection," says his paper.

Mautz tried to mask his study's intent by introducing three variations on male appearance, which were intermixed: body shape, height and penis size.

A researcher measures a model of a penis. A study has found length sways preference. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

A study group of 105 heterosexual women were then asked which picture they found most sexually attractive.

Perhaps unsurprisingly, they preferred men who were tall, long and V-shaped.

Overall, body shape accounted for about 80 per cent of the variation in attractiveness scores, penis size about six per cent and height about five per cent.

"The finding suggests that selection on penis size is potentially as strong as selection on stature."

That attraction, however, wasn't a simple formula of bigger is better.

"Attractiveness increases rapidly until you reach around average for each of the three traits," said Mautz. "Then, although the attractiveness continues to increase, it doesn't increase as much."

What was truly interesting was the interaction between the three traits, Mautz said.

"An increase in penis size if you're of average height does influence your attractiveness. It doesn't do quite as much as it does at the upper end of the height spectrum.

"If you're short, it doesn't matter what size your penis is." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hard numbers

Statistically, 185-cm-tall men get about twice the boost in attractiveness that their 165-cm friends do as length increases from 6 to 10 cm.

Gun control advocates show their love for guns

The message. Need to reassure Americans that nobody is going to take away the guns they bought legally

The White House released this photo of U.S. President Barack Obama shooting clay targets at Camp David, Md., last August to silence skeptics of his claim that he has actually shot a gun. THE WHITE HOUSE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Lobbying for gun control in the United States often means proving how much you like firearms.

New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo, whose state recently passed some of the strictest gun control measures in the country, often reminds people he is a hunter. Former Rep. Gabrielle Giffords, who founded a gun control advocacy group after surviving a gunshot wound to the head, says she and her husband keep two guns in a safe at home. Vice-President Joe Biden boasts that he owns two shotguns.

The message is obvious: They, too, are a part of America's gun culture. In a country where at least a third of households have firearms, it's hard to impose stricter arms rules without support from gun owners.

Gun rights groups scoffed at what they called clumsy and obvious attempts to ingratiate themselves with firearm owners even while trying to limit their rights.

But gun control proponents have pressed on with such efforts ahead of a crucial Senate vote on legislation backed by the Obama administration in response to the Dec. 14 shooting of 20 children and six educators at a Connecticut school.

Brazil

Officers on trial for 1992 prison riot massacre

Trial began on Monday for 26 Brazilian military police officers, some of them still on active duty, who are facing murder charges in the deaths of inmates in the infamous 1992 massacre at Sao Paulo's Carandiru prison, which left 111 inmates dead.

In total, 79 officers are to be tried in connection with the massacre following hours of rioting at the overcrowded facility.

Many critics see the "Carandiru massacre" as a symbol of police brutality and impunity. Many of the officers involved in the killings were promoted, and more than two decades on, only a single officer had been tried.

In 2001, Col. Ubiratan Guimaraes, was sentenced to 632 years in prison. But a state appeals court overturned the conviction in 2006 based on arguments that he was only following orders. Guimaraes was found dead in his Sao Paulo apartment seven months later with a gunshot wound to the chest.

British woman facing death sentence in Bali

An Indonesian court upheld a death sentence for a British woman convicted of smuggling $2.5 million US worth of cocaine onto the resort island of Bali, a court official said Monday.

The Bali High Court rejected an appeal from Lindsay June Sandiford, 56, who was convicted in January by a district court and sentenced to face a firing squad.

During the trial, Sandiford said she was forced to carry the drugs stuffed inside the lining of her luggage by a gang that threatened to hurt her children. Prosecutors had sought 15 years in prison for Sandiford, but the court surprised many by issuing a death sentence.

Four other defendants — three Britons and an Indian — connected to the case were sentenced to jail terms ranging from one to six years.

Mom confessed to dumping babies in trash, court hears

Meredith Borowiec in court last month. JANICE FLETCHER/THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Warning: Disturbing content. Woman tells police on tape that she knew they were alive

A woman charged with killing two of her newborns admitted to police that she heard the babies cry before she put them in trash bags and dropped them into garbage bins, but denied doing anything to hurt them before she threw them away.

Meredith Borowiec, 31, told police she had her first child in 2008 and didn't even look to see whether it was a boy or a girl before she wrapped the infant in a towel and put it in a garbage bag.

She admitted to the same scenario in 2009 when she again gave birth into a toilet in her Calgary apartment, wrapped the child in a towel and dropped it into the bathroom garbage before walking out to a dumpster.

In a video interview with police after her arrest in November 2011, Borowiec says she heard a noise "like a kitten" from her first child and, the following year, knew her second child was alive as well.

"It was like something took over me. It was like I wasn't in control," she says in the video.

Borowiec was initially charged with attempted murder after another newborn was saved from a trash bin outside the woman's home in 2010. A trial on that charge is scheduled for this fall.

She was later charged with second-degree murder in the deaths of the two other babies that investigators believe were born previously.

The video was played Monday at her trial on the murder charges.

Det. Karla Malsam-Dudar asks Borowiec what she was thinking as she dropped the babies, alive, into the garbage.

"That I was horrified with myself," she replies.

Malsam-Dudar asked Borowiec if she had done anything to silence the two infants.

"No. I didn't want to hurt it," Borowiec replies. "I don't have violent tendencies."

"What did you think would happen to them when you put them in the garbage?" Malsam-Dudar asks.

"I was hoping somebody would help them out."

The defence is challenging the admissibility of the evidence. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Trying to keep the secret

Meredith Borowiec says in a police interview that she kept her pregnancies secret from co-workers by telling them she only appeared pregnant because she had cysts on her uterus.

Girls plead not guilty to pimping other girls

The youngest victim of a prostitution trafficking ring, then 13, believed she was heading to a sleepover with girls, not much older than herself, who she'd met online — but instead she was drugged, stripped, photographed and pimped out, the Crown alleges.

Crown lawyers began arguing their case Monday against three teenage girls, two aged 15 and one 16 when they allegedly ran a prostitution ring in Ottawa last year.

All three pleaded not guilty to 36 charges, including human trafficking, forcible confinement, assault, robbery and uttering threats.

They are the first minors in Canada to be charged with human trafficking.

Two of the defendants are facing more charges, including three counts of making child pornography for allegedly taking photos of the victims and sending them to johns, as well as kidnapping, invitation to sexual touching and sexual assault.

The Youth Criminal Justice Act prevents the identification of both the accused and their alleged victims.

Crown lawyers Julien Lalande and Fara Rupert said their case will be built on the testimony of victims; some of the pimps; witnesses whom the girls talked to; as well as Facebook conversations, tweets and photos taken from the phone of one of the accused.

The Crown believes the accused befriended other girls, invited them to social events and then, through threats and violence, forced them to co-operate with their plans.

According to the Crown, four girls, three of them under the age of 18, were forced to perform sex acts, including oral and vaginal sex.

Two other girls were beaten, stripped and photographed, the Crown alleges. JESSICA SMITH/METRO IN OTTAWA

Into their world

The first witness, Det. Carolyn Botting, offered a glimpse into the accused girls' world when she described the graffiti officers found when they searched one of their bedrooms.

Canada remembers Iron Lady

Dead at 87. Political patrons and opponents reflect on Britain's polarizing PM Margaret Thatcher

A giant, an inspiration and an Iron Lady who rejuvenated conservative politics: that's how Margaret Thatcher was remembered Monday by Canadian politicians as they weighed in on the death of an influential British leader.

"I think if you look at the sweep of her life, what she did — not just in Britain, but what she did on the world stage — really laid the groundwork for the freedom and the prosperity and opportunity that so many people around the world enjoy today," Prime Minister Stephen Harper told a news conference.

In an earlier written statement, Harper described Thatcher, who died Monday of a stroke at age 87, as having had "that rarest of abilities to herself personify and define the age in which she served."

Liberal Bob Rae, while disowning Thatcher's politics, echoed that sentiment.

"Mrs. Thatcher served as British prime minister for more than a decade and in many ways defined conservative politics of her time," Rae said.

While the Conservative leader was the odd woman out on the right in the international scene when she came to power in 1979, she was soon joined by ideological cousins, including Ronald Reagan in Washington and Brian Mulroney in Ottawa.

"Like every great leader, with strong convictions and a bold vision, she made enemies. ... But in a series of visits to Canada she won many friends here," said Mulroney.

Maggie clad in iron

She wasn't called The Iron Lady for nothing. Shaped by a hard-line political and economic stance, Thatcher shut down national coal mines, slashed social spending, refused to recognize Northern Irish political prisoners and introduced a "poll tax."

Britain's first and only female PM

Thatcher, when elected in 1979, became Britain's first and so far only female prime minister, and the West's first female head of government. Her political dominance and leadership helped her in three consecutive terms, and inspired women worldwide to break the glass ceiling of male-dominated politics. She is also credited with contributing to the demise of the Communist bloc.

Queen of the '80s

With her fondness for the private sector, deregulation and big missiles, Maggie embodied the zeitgeist of the 1980s and she was loved for it. The 1982 Falklands War boosted her popularity, while she and Ronald Reagan formed a formidable power couple.

No sleep, no problem for one of the 'Sleepless Elite'

The tireless Thatcher famously said while in power she could get by on just four hours a night. She joins the genetically blessed "Sleepless Elite," a band of top historical figures and leaders (including Napoleon, Da Vinci, Churchill and Florence Nightingale) who needed five hours or less of shut-eye.

'Power dressing' personified

Her sense of style was as powerful as her politics. Sporting a helmet of deep strawberry hair, broad Royal blue skirt suits, and the famous handbag, Thatcher pioneered the "I'm shoulder to shoulder with men" look.

North Korea. Pyongyang suspends operations at North-South factory

North Korea said Monday it will suspend operations at a factory complex it has jointly run with South Korea, pulling out more than 53,000 North Korean workers and moving closer to severing its last economic link with its rival as tensions escalate.

The Kaesong industrial complex just north of the Demilitarized Zone is the biggest employer in North Korea's third-largest city. Shutting it would show the country is willing to hurt its own economy.

Pyongyang's move follows weeks of threatening rhetoric aimed at Seoul and its U.S. ally following UN sanctions punishing the North for its third nuclear test, on Feb. 12. In recent days there have also been worries in Seoul of an even larger provocation from Pyongyang, including another possible nuclear test or rocket launch.

Ireland. Inquest opens into death of Indian woman denied abortion

The widower of an Indian woman who died in an Irish hospital after being denied an abortion has told a coroner's inquest that a doctor denied her a termination on the grounds that "Ireland is a Catholic country."

Praveen Halappanavar made a lengthy statement Monday at the start of an investigation into why his 31-year-old wife, Savita, died at University Galway Hospital last October.

The hospital has already apologized. The inquest seeks to determine whether Halappanavar died because her miscarrying fetus was not aborted despite severe pain.

She died from blood poisoning and organ failure four days after the fetus' heartbeat stopped and its remains were removed.

Abortion remains outlawed in Ireland except in life-threatening cases. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Federal policy enabled RBC outsourcing mess, immigration expert says

Foreign workers. Firms are responding to incentives Ottawa created, lawyer notes

Observers say the controversy over the Royal Bank of Canada's decision to outsource dozens of Toronto jobs is part of an alarming trend bolstered by government policy.

Immigration law expert Audrey Macklin says the government encourages companies to employ temporary foreign workers either directly or indirectly by processing their immigration documents faster and by allowing companies to pay those workers up to 15 per cent less than Canadians.

She says a company like RBC is simply responding to incentives the government has created.

Human Resources minister Diane Finley has said the Temporary Foreign Worker Program is only to fill "acute labour needs" when Canadians aren't available for the work required.

But NDP Leader Tom Mulcair says the Conservative government has done nothing to stop a situation like RBC's, which he says is depriving Canadians of their livelihoods.

RBC has repeatedly said it did not hire foreign workers to take over the job functions of current employees, but said it used the services of outside companies to improve "operational effectiveness."

Many Canadians have expressed outrage and even threatened to close their accounts upon learning that Canada's largest bank had outsourced the jobs of 45 Toronto employees to an external supplier.

Shoe fetish?

Canuck men going beyond black brogues

Now that they've nailed the skinny suit, Canadian men have started buying up fashionable shoes to match. Sales of men's footwear increased by 13 per cent in Canada in 2012, according to research from The NPD Group.

While women's shoes sales grew by three per cent in 2012, sales of footwear for men pulled overall growth in the industry up by six per cent, to a total of $5.1 billion in sales.

"We're always quick to assume that women impel the success of the footwear market, but what we're experiencing instead in Canada is a complete takeover of the shoe closet by men's footwear," said Tracey Jarosz, executive director for Canada Fashion at The NPD Group. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Nuclear accidents.

Feds' proposed liability limits not enough: Greenpeace

Newly released government documents suggest Ottawa wants nuclear operators to be on the hook for more than $650 million in damages in case of an accident.

But Greenpeace Canada says the documents also suggest Ottawa is talking only to the nuclear industry as it redefines its nuclear liability regime.

"We're concerned that the Harper government's cosy relationship with industry is putting the interests of the nuclear lobby above the safety of Canadians," said Shawn-Patrick Stensil, a nuclear analyst with Greenpeace Canada.

Using access to information laws, Greenpeace obtained a consultation paper that Natural Resources Canada sent out to stakeholders in May 2011 — a couple of months after the disaster at the Fukushima plant in Japan — outlining why Canada needs to modernize its nuclear civil liabilities rules.

The paper says Canada's current liability of $75 million is hopelessly out of date, but also suggests that even more recent proposals to set the cap at $650 million are now looking too low. Greenpeace is urging Canada to move to unlimited liability, arguing that taxpayers should not have to foot any of the bill for industrial activity.

SNAP, SEND, SEE IT DISAPPEAR

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

"I'm not using it for sexting!" I exclaimed as I snatched my iPhone back from my friend whose eyebrows were raised disbelievingly. I had just received a slew of notifications from Snapchat and felt the need to defend my decision to download an app known for promiscuous photo exchanges.

If you're not in high school, there's about an 80 per cent chance you've never even heard of Snapchat, so allow me to fill you in. The decidedly simple app allows users to transmit photos and videos that expire after a prescribed amount of time: between one and 10 seconds. Once a message has been viewed, it disappears from the user's phone and Snapchat's own company servers. The free app is a relatively inane form of time-wasting, but it's also strangely addictive.

Creators Evan Spiegel and Bobby Murphy originally designed the app as part of a class project at Stanford University. When presenting their idea, a venture capitalist sitting in on the class told Spiegel that the app could be interesting if he made the photos permanent. The tech-loving wunderkind and his partner ignored this advice and launched the self-destructing messaging service to the public in September 2011.

Available on iPhone and Android devices, the free app currently has more active users than Instagram, but isn't without its critics. Many have dismissed it as a way for bored teenagers to exchange risqué messages without getting caught by their parents. But while it's likely that many are using the service to transmit content of the not-so-clothed variety, it's important to note that the app is gaining traction and developing a substantial user base beyond the horny coed demographic. More than 100 million images and videos are sent through Snapchat every day and the app is generating a lot of buzz — although no actual revenue as of yet.

As we become increasingly obsessed with documenting and cataloguing our lives on social media, I can see the appeal behind a communication tool that operates on impermanence.

While most social-networking platforms are highly self-conscious — requiring users to create their own carefully curated persona to package and present to their friends and fans — Snapchat facilitates a more spontaneous and candid form of communication.

Its growing popularity is a reactionary response to the highly processed and everlasting content on other social media platforms. Not everything we say and do should stick around forever and it's this desire for impermanent forms of expression that Spiegel and Murphy were able to tap into. Despite the opposition, the young developers — who have since received nearly $14 million in venture funding — knew that the disappearing nature of the messaging service would be its ultimate appeal. So even though it might be known for facilitating evidence-free sexting, the app also offers a new way for all of us to avoid being haunted by a "digital trail" and communicate in a more uninhibited manner.

Drones used to protect rhinos

ANUPAM NATH/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cameras help spot poachers in Indian national park

Wildlife authorities used drones on Monday for aerial surveillance of a sprawling natural game park in northeastern India to protect the one-horned rhinoceros from armed poachers.

Security officers conducted flights of the unmanned aircraft over the Kaziranga National Park. The drones will be flown at regular intervals to prevent rampant poaching in the park located in the remote Indian state of Assam.

The drones are equipped with cameras and will be monitored by security guards, who find it difficult to guard the 480-square kilometre reserve. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Park has largest number of one-horned rhinos in the world

- Poachers armed with automatic rifles killed 22 rhinos last year in the park, but have killed 16 rhinos already this year.
- Rhino horn is in great demand in China and Southeast Asia, where it is believed to have medicinal properties.
- In recent weeks, wildlife authorities in Assam have deployed 300 armed guards to protect the rhinos in Kaziranga, but they have been no match for organized gangs of poachers who have been managing to strike at the rhinos with increasing regularity.

New on RMR: I'm wearing pink to protest bullying

RICK MERCER
Guest columnist
readers@metronews.ca

Tomorrow I will wear pink. Full disclosure: I don't usually wear pink. I'm a black-and-white guy, and even blue jeans are a stretch. That said, I am happy to make the exception if it means stating loud and clear that bullying, discrimination, homophobia and transphobia in schools and communities across Canada must end.

We all know that bullying can be fatal.

We've heard the tragic tales of kids like Jamie Hubley and Amanda Todd, who ended their lives after being subjected to bullying at school. We hate to admit it but we know that there are more kids out there today who are suffering in silence.

The Day of Pink is an important solution to this problem not only because it helps to raise awareness but because of where the idea originally came from.

When students in Nova Scotia saw a younger student being harassed because he was wearing pink, they decided to do something. They took it upon themselves to buy every pink shirt in town and they did it on their own dime. The next day they handed these shirts out at school. Suddenly the bullies who were making this young man's life miserable were surrounded by students in pink. They learned in no uncertain terms that the vast majority of kids were not going to accept their behaviour. Message sent. To me, the kindness, courage, compassion and creativity exhibited by this gesture is what being Canadian is all about.

Those kids stood up for someone who wasn't in a position to stand up for himself. They could not have any idea what they started. This past year, 8.1 million kids around the world wore pink on the International Day of Pink to send the same message. The Day of Pink, like the zipper, is a Canadian success story. Someone should get these kids the Order of Canada.

Kudos to Jer's Vision, an incredible organization of young people, for working so hard to make the Day of Pink an international success story. I'm proud to support them and I look to them for solutions.

They are young, I am not, and they know what's going on in Canadian schools. Thankfully, I don't. I will take their lead. They want me to wear pink? I'm in.

So please, folks, wear pink tomorrow or, at the very least, throw a red sock in your white laundry tonight.

Hyde Park on Hudson

Director. Roger Michell

Stars. Bill Murray, Laura Linney, Olivia Williams

Bill Murray makes a charming Franklin Delano Roosevelt and Laura Linney a stoic mistress Daisy in Hyde Park on Hudson, a film split between history, gossip and whimsy. But they've both got their work cut out for them with the wafer-thin screenplay, which Richard Nelson adapted from his BBC radio play of the same name. Titled for FDR's upstate New York retreat, where America's longest-serving president took refuge — and rumoured sexual liaisons — as the Second World War threatened, Roger Michell's film struggles for definition as either daffy comedy or insider's view of history. Samuel West and Olivia Colman steal scenes as visiting King George VI and wife Queen Elizabeth (the future Queen Mum), befuddled by hot dogs and emboldened by booze during their 1939 visit with FDR, but The King's Speech 2 this isn't.

Best of Warner Bros. 20 Film Collection: Romance

Continuing its 90th anniversary celebration with a romance-themed boxed set, Warner Bros. also showcases the strong women who have enlivened the studio's classics. This collection spans decades, continents and temperaments: from the spiky southern belles of Jezebel — Gone With the Wind, Annie Get Your Gun, Cat on a Hot Tin Roof and Splendor in the Grass — to the northerly tempests of The Philadelphia Story, Now, Voyager, A Streetcar Named Desire and Rebel Without a Cause; to the foreign femmes and intrigues of Casablanca, Mrs. Miniver and Doctor Zhivago; to the modern women and wiles of A Touch of Class, The Goodbye Girl, The Bodyguard, You've Got Mail and Two Weeks Notice.

How to shoot for Mars with $2 million

Kickstart cred.
Veronica Mars creator Rob Thomas lets Metro in on some of the details about the upcoming fan-funded film

MICHELLE CASTILLO
Metro World News in New York

Rob Thomas gave Metro World News some details about the upcoming Veronica Mars movie — which is scheduled for release in 2014 — and details about how the project came to be.

The initial goal of $2 million seems small for a movie. Would it even be possible to make a Veronica Mars film with that budget?
When Kristen and I went into it, we sort of agreed that we would make the, she called it the "No fancy trailers" budget. She and her husband had just done that movie, Hit and Run, and I think they made it for around $2 million.

So that was part of the ethos of it.

Who is returning (besides Bell and Dohring)? Aren't they a little too old for high school or even college?
We're in negotiations with the other cast members, and I've spoken to all the other cast members. Absolutely people want to do it, and I'm building it around the 10-year high school reunion, so I'm planning on using the bulk of them but deals still have to be made.

(Kristen) is 28 as we pick up the movie. She has just got out of law school at Columbia and starting to interview for jobs in New York law firms.

Why do you think fans have responded to Veronica Mars so much?
The key to achieving the cult status is being able to hang on for a while. The fact that we started on UPN, and we were allowed to survive some not terrific numbers for a while was part of the equation because having done ABC, we'd only have been on for two episodes and we would never have been allowed to grow into a cult status.

Seinfeld started out with an order of six on a death night, and they allowed that to build. It went beyond cult status. I think being somewhere where no one noticed, where you weren't expected to do good numbers or great numbers was key, and I think the character herself, Veronica, was a great fit for UPN.

When I first went in there to have a meeting, they told me the direction they wanted to take the network. They said, "We think we're going to skew young and female, and we're looking for female empowerment shows."

I had written Veronica Mars a year before on spec. I had just written it for myself because it was an idea I was inspired by. I told them, "Well, I have a script in a drawer at home about a very empowered teenage girl."

I taught high school, in particular I taught freshman English. I was the adviser of the yearbook. I hung out with a lot of teenage girls. I had a lot of teenage girls' voices in my head. As a yearbook adviser, that's primarily who you're there after school with on worknights with. I think girls at that age are some of the most self-conscious people on the planet.

One of the things I thought about Veronica Mars is that if she had some superhero power it's that she's beyond self-consciousness — that her life had taken her down such a rocky road, and she'd come out the other side and it was a pretty tough girl. She could say those things that I think teenage girls often wished they could say or (were) bold enough to say in a make no apologies sort of way, and I think that connected with a UPN audience.

What about your other series Party Down? Will you be trying Kickstarter with that?
We're down a path with that. We hope that will become a movie as well. We're not going the Kickstarter route. We're writing a script for an independent production company that we really respect. We hope for good news on that in the next year or so.

Ryan Gosling is a melting pot of masculine clichés in his latest flick. HANDOUT

Muscles, tattoos, guns and Ryan Gosling

The Place Beyond the Pines. Actor talks about playing a guy who makes nothing but bad decisions

MATT PRIGGE
Metro World News in New York

Yes, Ryan Gosling is aware of the "Hey girl" meme. When the subject is bravely broached, the already quiet actor smiles and squirms in his chair.

"Remember when Fabio was on that rollercoaster and he got hit in the face by a pigeon? I kind of feel like that pigeon lately. Wrong place, wrong time."

Gosling is bit more open when talking about his new film, The Place Beyond the Pines, his second for director Derek Cianfrance. The two are on the same page.

"We were making Blue Valentine," he remembers, "and I had this cockamamie theory that I could rob a bank and get away with it. I wasn't so afraid of jail. He said that was crazy, that he had just written a movie about that. So it felt like we should make it."

In the Place Beyond the Pines, Gosling plays Luke, a face-tattooed carnival motorcycle racer who, in the opening, discovers one of his flings has resulted in a baby boy. In an effort to support him, and hopefully reunite with the mother (Eva Mendes), he becomes a bank robber. This is only the first act of the film, and his actions have repercussions throughout the shape-shifting narrative.

"It's all about consequences," Gosling explains. "It's this guy who's a melting pot of masculine clichés: muscles, tattoos, motorcycles, guns, knives. He learns those things don't make you a man at all. He's not a man, he's just surface — a superficial person without depth. In keeping with his character, he has this melodramatic, over-romanticized idea of how to turn this sinking ship around."

Not that he did too much delving into his character. "There's not much going on inside of Luke. He's a pretty surface-level person who is faced with his own lack of depth. I tried not to think too much," he says.

Reality — in ink

Derek Cianfrance and Ryan Gosling put the priority on realism, down to the tiniest detail, including Gosling's tattoos for the film. "We wanted to make the tattoos look a mess, from someone who lived a life of not thinking things through and making bad decisions," says Gosling.

Jay-Z and Beyoncé in hot water over their Havana nights

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Jay-Z and Beyoncé Knowles may be in trouble for their lavish fifth wedding anniversary trip to Cuba last week, as it's raising eyebrows with a few Florida politicians, according to Reuters. "Despite the clear prohibition against tourism in Cuba (for U.S. citizens), numerous press reports described the couple's trip as tourism, and the Castro regime touted it as such in its propaganda," Florida Representatives Ileana Ros-Lehtinen and Mara Dias-Balart say in a letter to the director of the Office of Foreign Assets Control. "We represent a community of many who have been deeply and personally harmed by the Castro regime's atrocities, including former political prisoners and families of murdered innocents."

A rep for Jay-Z and Beyoncé was unavailable for comment.

There is no word on how Jay-Z and Beyoncé were allowed to enter the country (travel for American citizens is very strict). My working theory? They are secretly Canadian.

Fest a 'recipe for disaster' for Lohan: Friend

Lindsay Lohan infamously scheduled her upcoming 90-day rehab stint to start next month so that she can hit up the Coachella music festival starting this weekend, but at least one friend thinks she should skip it.

"I fear for her life if she goes to the festival," Danish promoter Claus Hjelmbak tells Radar Online. "Lindsay is in a very dark place right now, and I'm absolutely scared for her life. Coachella is the last place she needs to be. For someone struggling with addiction, like Lindsay, the amount of drugs and alcohol at Coachella is just a recipe for disaster waiting to happen."

The music festival takes place over two weekends in the desert near Palm Springs, with a packed schedule of famous bands set to perform, including the Red Hot Chili Peppers, Moby and the Airborne Toxic Event.

Barrymore is fine with not having it all

Drew Barrymore is learning a lot now that she's a mom. "I know it seems like I do everything, but there's so much I had to give up. Things have to go and that's unfortunate," she tells Us Weekly. "You know that you're going to miss out on your child's upbringing or you realize that your relationship is going to suffer if you work night and day and weekends. Unfortunately, I was raised in this, like, generation of like, 'Women can have it all,' and I don't think you can. I think some things fall off the table. The good news is, what does stay on the table becomes much more important."

How Beyoncé bid bye bye to her baby Blue weight

Fitness. Squats, shakes and nerves of steel — we look back on how the bootylicious singer got back into shape after giving birth to her daughter

ROMINA McGUINNESS
life@metronews.ca

We find out how she was sure to squeeze into her (super tight) stage clothes so quickly.

Pack it on, get it off

Beyoncé gained a total of 57 pounds throughout her pregnancy.

But with her first show scheduled just three short months after having her baby, she had to lose it all — and fast.

At the time, she was quoted as saying, "I'm definitely softer, but I feel my body bouncing back."

It did.

And it probably wasn't much fun.

"Y'all have no idea how hard I worked! I had to lose 60 pounds. They had me on that treadmill. I ate lettuce!" she confessed to her fans.

But her trainer, Marco Borges, explained how her slimmed-down frame was simply the result of proper nutrition, regular workouts and breastfeeding.

One year on, she's maintained a stable weight.

Proper nutrition — eat lean, eat green and stick to your plan

After initially shedding the extra pounds by sticking to a diet of vegetables, fruit, nuts, seeds, grains and clean proteins, Life & Style reported that in order to make sure the weight didn't creep back on, Beyoncé has one vegan meal a day.

The eating plan was recommended by Borges, who believes that a meat and dairy-free meal is a great way to get, "people to eat more greens than they normally would."

And whenever she craves a crunchy snack, she ditches the chips and reaches out for something healthy like edamame beans, green apples or cucumbers sprinkled with vinegar, cayenne pepper and lemon.

Fierce discipline, regular explosive workouts

Fitting into tiny corsets and exposing your thighs in fishnet tights is a struggle for most women. Yes, even Beyoncé. Opening up to Shape Magazine just weeks before the start of her world tour, the singer revealed how difficult keeping in shape can be.

"I'm not a person that is naturally very thin. I am a person that has to work at keeping my body in shape," she said.

But how does she manage to do that?

It's thanks to her drive, determination and dedication, Borges said, also to Shape.

"We do a combination of cardio, calisthenics, resistance exercises and yoga. Whether she's doing lunges, plies, reverse lunges or squats, she does 100 repetitions. When you do those sets, it is really an extension of your cardio, so you can sculpt muscles while building endurance. Beyoncé is really hardcore. She trains for 60 to 90 minutes, four to five days a week."

She sweat and she ate lettuce. But never once did she give up her boobs, her hips or her bum in favour of skin and bone. She's a healthy, happy working mama.

Commuting by bicycle can be a great way to savour the sunshine and jump-start your fitness routine while being eco-friendly.

Inexperienced city cyclists might feel intimidated by busy streets and speedy drivers at first, but it is easy to gain confidence quickly while navigating a city on two wheels. After more than a decade of riding and working with bicycles in Tampa and New York City, bike mechanic Max Boyajian is familiar with the challenges cyclists face in crowded areas. He shared a few tips for starting out as a bike commuter.

Fill 'er up

If a bike hasn't been used through the winter, the tires will need to be refilled. If you don't own your own pump, almost every bike shop has free air available for passing cyclists.

Keep calm

Even if they are following the rules of the road, city cyclists are bound to get honked at by irritated drivers. Don't let it rattle you, and don't provoke drivers unnecessarily. "You've got to learn how to be honked at," Boyajian says.

Plan for the weather

Waterproof outerwear can protect you from rain. Keep your clothes professional-looking by installing fenders onto your wheels. "They might look dumb, but they're better than a strip of mud across your back," Boyajian says.

A right to ride

Be careful passing parked cars.

- Rules of the road. Drivers might not check for bikes after they park, meaning they could open their doors into an oncoming cyclist. Cyclists have the right to ride in the centre of a lane.

Can your eyes get sunburned?

Sunglasses: no longer just a fashion accessory. ISTOCK PHOTOS

Yes. While on assignment in Portugal, CNN's Anderson Cooper famously sunburned his eyeballs.

He described the experience: "I wake up in the middle of the night and it feels like my eyes are on fire — my eyeballs! — and I think, oh, maybe I have sand in my eyes or something."

Yes, it can happen, and at any time of year. Our content editor, Melissa Greer, interviewed Dr. Cheryl Zimmer of the Canadian Association of Optometrists.

"The front clear surface of the eye, called the cornea, is composed of tissue similar to the skin. It's very susceptible to the elements — wind and sun, in particular," Zimmer said.

The resulting keratitis can cause blurry vision and very sore eyes, and can take 24 to 72 hours to heal.

Squinting may protect your eyes but it can lead to headaches and eye strain, so the best protection is a pair of sunglasses, says Zimmer. She suggests a pair that blocks both UVA and UVB rays. According to Health Canada's website, manufacturers follow voluntary industry standards when labelling sunglasses.

Those labelled general purpose block 60 to 92 per cent of visible light and UVA rays, and between 95 and 99 per cent of UVB rays.

How to avoid getting caught in hormonal hell

Get yourself back on track with these simple changes to your diet. ISTOCK PHOTOS

Health. Your period shouldn't cause you misery. An expert gives some tips on how changing your diet can help

MEREDITH ENGEL
Metro World News

If you thought PMS, bloating and zits were all just the lowlights of being a woman, Alisa Vitti would like you to think again.

"What's normal is to feel great all month, to have natural conception, not to have postpartum depression," says Vitti, a women's health expert and the author of Woman Code: Perfect Your Cycle, Amplify Your Fertility, Supercharge Your Sex Drive and Become a Power Source.

"What's normal is a sex drive that increases as you age.

"What's normal is a metabolism that's helping you maintain your healthy weight. Anything that's not, that isn't normal."

If you're often in hormonal hell, Vitti has a plan to get you back on track — and it starts with your diet.

What to avoid

Soy

Specifically, stay away from soy protein isolate.

"Most soy products are highly concentrated in soy protein isolate," Vitti says, "Which is full of concentrated estrogen and exacerbates hormonal symptoms."

If you must have soy, choose fermented options, including miso paste and tempeh, in moderation. Tofu is OK in small quantities, as long as it's GMO-free.

Dairy

"The casein in dairy has been shown to build up a plaque on the small intestine," Vitti says, which blocks the absorption of vital micronu- trients.

Concerned about calcium?

Vitti says that on her plan, eliminating dairy also means adding in more foods that are good sources of calcium, like kale, bok choy and sunflower seeds.

Gluten

"Wheat-based products cause such inflammation in the intestine," says the women's health expert.

What to load up on

Fermented foods

"(They) provide the body with probiotics, which help you absorb more nutrients," Vitti says.

Sweet potatoes

"I love them for the vitamin A to help with your liver," Vitti says.

Pasture-fed eggs

"They help the body make progesterone, which keeps PMS symptoms away," Vitti says.

Avocados

"(They have) EFAs that keep our hormones really, really healthy," adds the book author.

I can never make enough of this simple salad.

In restaurants, roasted peppers are often marinated in oil, which adds calories and fat. Here I use only one tablespoon of olive oil — and the results are outstanding.

Red, yellow, and orange bell peppers contain an abundance of beta carotene and antioxidants, which help in the fight against cancer.

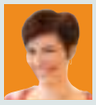
Rhubarb rights and wrongs



NUTRI-BITES

Rosy red is the colour of spring; pick rhubarb while the cardinals sing.

Rhubarb is a wild vegetable that we treat culinarily as a fruit.

Not only is it loaded with B vitamins, if you go for the redder the stalks, there is more skin saving Vitamin A in your pie. To boot, this delicious delivery system of eye protection has everything your eyes are looking for: beta carotene, lutein and zeaxathin.

Things NOT to do with rhubarb:

- Do not eat the leaves. They contain nutrient binding oxalic acid as well as poisonous glycosides.
- Do not ruin the low cal benefits by cooking with too much sugar; keep it tart.
- Do not store raw stalks at room temperature. Either store in fridge in plastic or chop and freeze immediately.

Here is the best cooking method to make a spread or pancake topping: Bring 1/4 cup orange juice to a boil; add 2 tablespoons of maple syrup, 1 tablespoon of sugar. Add 1.5 cups chopped rhubarb. Simmer until smooth.

Eric Akis's goal when he wrote his book Everyone Can Cook Everything was to create a kitchen bible that people with any level of culinary expertise can use on a daily basis.

Akis said the style of cooking he likes "is based on the Italian model with really fresh vegetables, good simple ingredients, good olive oil, fresh garlic. It could be that beautiful piece of fish, chicken that I've bought from the corner butcher shop and just keep it simple. Let the ingredients sing."

That's exactly the case with this Romaine With Oranges, Feta and Olives salad. Akis says if you prefer, you can swap out romaine with an equal amount of spinach leaves or baby salad greens.

1. In a salad bowl, whisk together orange juice, vinegar, oil, sugar, salt and pepper.

2. Add remaining salad ingredients and gently toss.

3. Divide among plates or serve on a large platter, ensuring some of the oranges, cheese, olives, onions and tomatoes decorate the top. THE CANADIAN PRESS/ EVERYONE CAN COOK EVERYTHING BY ERIC AKIS (WHITECAP, 2012)

Resistance to change: Late night shows still shunning women, minority hosts

The role of female talk show hosts in late-night TV broadcast network history, all 50-plus years of it, can be summed up in two words: Joan Rivers. It takes just another two — Arsenio Hall — to do the same for minorities.

There's no indication that's going to change in the latest round of musical chairs involving Tonight and Late Night. All the NBC, ABC and CBS showcase jobs at 11:30 p.m. eastern and later appear likely to remain securely in white men's hands.

Jay Leno is handing off to Jimmy Fallon, with speculation tagging Seth Meyers as his likely successor. Meanwhile, David Letterman, Jimmy Kimmel, Craig Ferguson and Carson Daly are sitting pretty, without the faintest drumbeat of a pair of advancing high heels to signal a threat.

There have been alternatives bandied about — Chelsea Handler, black comedian-writer Aisha Tyler — but no hints they or others are getting traction.

"In real life it seems to me that women have definitely shown themselves to be able to carry on a conversation," said Merrill Markoe, the Emmy-Award-winning writer who helped David Letterman create Late Night at NBC. "Women have exhibited an interest in talking for centuries. I'm not sure how it is that no one has seemed to notice."

NBC did not respond to requests for comment on the issue. But if belles du jour Tina Fey and Amy Poehler can excel at TV sitcoms and movies and teach Ricky Gervais a thing or two (or three) about hosting the Golden Globes, could they be queens of the night with their own talk shows? Or maybe a Hispanic or Asian-American man could have a turn. We may miss out on a Jimmy Kimmel Live clip of a heavyset woman lifting her T-shirt, and the host then warning us, "I need to take a break. I'm going to throw up," but we might get other thrills.

Women and minorities have conquered other traditionally white male-dominated arenas, on and off TV — think anchorwoman Diane Sawyer, President Barack Obama — but in late-night even daring cable is content with the homogenized likes of Conan O'Brien, Jon Stewart and Stephen Colbert, with such occasional dashes as E!'s Handler, BET's Mo'Nique and TBS' now-gone George Lopez thrown in.

Rivers, who became host of Fox's The Late Show in 1986 after filling in as the sole regular guest host on Johnny Carson's Tonight, calls the lack of female hosts "beyond" frustrating.

Blame the broadcast industry's resistance toward change and the risk of failure, she said: "Everybody is running so scared, and has always run scared."

And executives can find reasons, or excuses, for keeping the status quo.

"They had surveys at NBC, and the surveys were that women would rather watch a man at night, which is what they're always throwing up in your face," Rivers said.

That's an argument that's still made, privately, in the industry: Women want to hear their pre-bedtime monologue jokes from a man, while Oprah Winfrey, Ellen DeGeneres and Katie Couric are welcome in daytime. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Survey says

U.S. women now twice as likely to live with a guy before marriage

Nearly half of young U.S. women say the first time they lived with a guy, they weren't married.

That's the finding of a government survey released Thursday.

The results are a marked change from 1995, when only 34 per cent said they moved in together. Now it's 48 per cent. Back then, 39 per cent said they married first, compared to 23 now.

Experts say the numbers show living together is increasingly used as a testing ground for marriage. About 40 per cent of the women who lived with a guy went on to marry him within three years.

Getting in shape isn't always easy, but it helps when you have constant motivation from your partner.

"My boyfriend was a huge help in terms of introducing me to a fit lifestyle and keeping me motivated," says Bianca Del Bois of Burlington, Ont., who used to live an unhealthy lifestyle but is now a healthy fitness guru.

For most couples, it really helps if both parties are into a healthier lifestyle. "We do the same routines together, jog together and do some creative outdoor workouts," says Del Bois. Working out with your partner can be fun, but are healthier couples really happier couples?

"Without sounding biased, yes!" says Del Bois. "I've never been happier or healthier in a relationship before. We really motivate each other to reach our full potential."

Now training to compete for two bikini competitions in May and June, Del Bois is always changing her diet and workout to keep it fresh.

It sounds easy but it has been hard work.

She finds that the improvements in her lifestyle have made this all worth it. "Physically I've increased stamina during cardio sessions, much more muscle definition and toning and an overall healthy appearance," says Del Bois.

Now people are so amazed by her hard work transformation that they go to her for help to achieve their fitness goals, so what advice does she have for us?

"The first steps to getting in shape would be to adjust your eating habits and just start with 30 to 45 minutes of physical activity a day, whether it's cardio, weight training, or even a Zumba class."

She also showcases her hard work, healthy recipes, and gives advice on her Facebook page, YouTube channel, and blog.

Nasty T5 slip surprise? Don't panic

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

A reader who owned 200 Kraft Foods shares received a nasty surprise when a T5 slip arrived showing nearly $3,000 in U.S. dividend income.

Kraft Foods Group split into Kraft Foods and Mondelez International in October, 2012. Every 100 shares of Kraft turned into 100 of Mondelez and roughly 33 of Kraft. The Kraft shares are deemed to be a foreign dividend by the Canada Revenue Agency and taxed as ordinary income.

If you are in this situation, don't panic about suddenly having more income than expected.

"An election can be made under Section 86.1 of the Income Tax Act to exclude the deemed dividend from income," notes Winnipeg-based tax expert and author, Evelyn Jacks. "This election must be made in writing and sent to CRA.

Owning company shares can show as extra income on your T5. ISTOCK IMAGES

"Indicate the number and cost base for the original Kraft Foods Inc. shares; and the shares received as a result of the spin-off. If you make the election to exclude the dividends, then the cost base of the post spin-off shares is based on the cost base of the original Kraft Foods Inc. shares. The cost base is allocated between the new shares according to the fair market value immediately after the spin-off." (Sign up for Jacks' free tax newsletter knowledgebureau.com)

So far so good, but now we must establish a cost base for the shares to report when and if they are sold.

Jacks comes to the rescue with a little math. Let's say the shares were purchased for $20, $4,000 in total for this reader. This is called the Average Cost Base, ACB. The Mondelez shares were trading at $28 and the Kraft shares at $45.42 per share, post spin-off. Therefore the 200 Mondelez shares were worth $5,600 and the 66 Kraft Foods Group shares came to $2,997.72 US.

Take that $4,000 ACB and allocate it like this:

Mondelez: $4,000 x $5,600 divided by ($5,600+$2,997.72) = $2,605.34

Kraft: $4,000 x $2,997.34 divided by ($5,600+$2,997.72) = $1,394.48.

Those are the new ACBs for the shares. If you sell half the Mondelez and half the Kraft in the future, adjust the cost base accordingly to report the capital gain or loss on your taxes. Stick the formula, and a few notes, in your investment file so you can reconstruct what you've done down the road. Now go take a headache remedy.

Five warning signs of card payment fraud

As more Canadian businesses begin to offer online shopping and online and mobile sales continue to grow, security experts point out that a few bad apples are also using the popularity of online shopping to scam merchants with stolen payment card information.

"The good news is business owners and their employees can play a crucial role in the fight against fraud and they already have the tools to recognize and stop online, mobile or phone purchases carried out with stolen card data," says Gord Jamieson, head of security for Visa Canada.

Jamieson notes that business owners can be at risk when a payment card is not physically present.

To help identify this type of fraud before it occurs, he recommends merchants watch for the following five warning signs when carrying out transactions without the payment card:

- Multiple purchases made with different cards, shipped to a single address

This can indicate a batch of stolen payment card account numbers.

Are you a business owner? Do your part to fight fraud! ISTOCK IMAGES

- Multiple high value transactions made on the same card over a very short period of time

This can indicate an attempt to "run the card" until the account is closed.

- Multiple purchases made on a card with a single billing address, shipped to many different addresses

This may indicate organized criminal activity.

- Online transactions with multiple cards but a single IP address

This may indicate a batch of stolen cards being run from the same computer.

- Multiple transactions in close succession with very similar account numbers

This may indicate account numbers that have been generated using illegal software.

According to Jamieson, merchants or employees who come across any of these warning signs should request additional information from the cardholder. NEWS CANADA

DREAM BIG

ISTOCKPHOTO/THINKSTOCK

The world is a faster-moving, more competitive place than ever before. It is smaller, too. If you want to compete — if you want to make money — you have to get a good education.

But that's nothing new, is it? The days when you could get ahead without post-secondary education of some kind are long gone. No matter what field you belong to, chances are you will have a certificate, diploma or degree on your resumé. That piece of paper isn't just your means of getting ahead, it's your means of getting started.

Luckily, colleges and universities in this country are there to help. More than ever, they are meeting students halfway — offering full-time, part-time, accelerated and even online delivery models to suit almost anyone's lifestyle, learning style, or schedule.

And their variety of offerings continues to grow. Universities are expanding their degree programs into new subject areas, reflecting a more multicultural, tolerant, technocratic society. Many colleges offer degree programs now, too, while maintaining the focus they have always had on matching students with great jobs.

These schools aren't strictly for young people, either. Mature students, hoping to retrain, upgrade their skills or seek out new careers entirely, are being welcomed into programs designed with their needs in mind.

A good education remains our best way of finding the work we are meant to do — a career we are passionate about, one that inspires us to keep improving and keep learning for the rest of our lives.

Post-secondary institutions of all kinds will be starting their spring and summer programs soon. One of those programs might be right for you. Do your research, ask questions and, most importantly, don't be afraid to dream big. Your educational journey is just getting started.

U OF REGINA DOING ITS PART

BRINGING EDUCATION TO ABORIGINALS

Keith Bird

The number of Aboriginal Canadians achieving post-secondary education in this country remains far too low. It is estimated that 65,000 new graduates will be required to close the gap, a large challenge requiring co-operation between Aboriginal representatives, government, and educational institutions.

The University of Regina is doing its part.

This May, the university will host Aboriginal Summit 2013 — a coming together of Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal educators and policy-makers, each of whom has made improving access to post-secondary education a priority.

When the summit concludes, the work will continue. The University of Regina's percentage of students who self-identify as Aboriginal is one of the highest in Canada — approximately 10 per cent — and addressing their educational needs is a priority. This means offering proper transition programming for students before they enrol, and social, cultural and educational support for them afterward.

The university achieves this in several ways. One of the most visible is the Aboriginal Student Centre, an inviting space where Aboriginal students can interact with one another, with instructors and staff, tutors, cultural figures, and even community leaders. The ASC recently underwent a substantial renovation, doubling its size. These renovations include elaborate glasswork created by Keith Bird, a retired iron worker and member of the Cote First Nation, currently pursuing his master's degree at the university.

Perhaps the U of R's biggest contribution to Aboriginal education is its partnership with the First Nations University of Canada. FNUniv provides Aboriginal students with a unique educational environment, combining classroom-based instruction with traditional ceremonies and other cultural experiences. All of FNUniv's courses, programs, and instructors are accredited by the University of Regina, which also opens all of its classes to FNUniv students.

Meanwhile, the University of Regina continues indigenizing its own campus, through initiatives like the Aboriginal Advisory Circle, a group of Aboriginal faculty and staff who meet regularly to advise the university president on matters concerning Aboriginal students.

These measures, and many others, aren't intended simply to benefit Aboriginal students. Through improved dialogue and interaction, students of all backgrounds can enjoy the rich cultural heritage of Canada's Aboriginal Peoples.

SUMMIT WILL AIM TO NARROW EDUCATION GAP

When Dr. Lloyd Barber passed away in 2011, he left to the University of Regina a legacy fund, intended for one purpose — the promotion of Aboriginal education. He knew that closing the gap in educational attainment between Aboriginals and non-Aboriginals was vital, not just for the former group, but for the latter, too. Education is the first step to understanding.

The university has invested this gift in several ways. One of the most important is the upcoming Aboriginal Summit, to be held May 23-24.

"We are pleased to host this national summit," says Vianne Timmons, the university's president and vice-chancellor. "It is a way to honour Dr. Barber and build upon his legacy of, and commitment, to Aboriginal post-secondary education in Canada."

Speakers and panelists will include Chief Perry Bellegarde of the Little Black Bear First Nation, Paul Davidson, president, Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, Roberta Jamieson, lawyer and activist, and Dr. Lloyd Axworthy, president, University of Winnipeg.

The theme of the summit is Identifying Best Practices. Speakers will address this theme in several ways, focusing on issues such as scholarship support for Aboriginal students, and provincial and national initiatives related to education. They will also discuss outreach — how to build links between educational institutions and Aboriginal communities that make education accessible and inviting for young people.

"Aboriginal people in Saskatchewan, and across Canada, have traditionally been underserved by our post-secondary education system," Timmons says. "There has been tremendous progress in recent years, in large part due to the work of visionaries like Dr. Barber, but the educational attainment gap still remains. This summit will help us find ways to narrow it."

Attendees from across Canada — many of them leaders in post-secondary education themselves — have already registered for Aboriginal Summit 2013. To be one of them, visit aboriginalsummit2013.ca.

NHL. Sniper breaks 9-game drought as Toronto picks up big win over New York

Phil Kessel couldn't have picked a better time to end his nine-game goal-scoring drought.

The veteran forward scored twice, including the game-winner in the third period, and added an assist to lead the Toronto Maple Leafs to a 4-3 win over the New York Rangers on Monday night to open an important home-and-home series between the Eastern Conference rivals.

Toronto (22-13-4) remained fifth in the East but moved four points ahead of idle Ottawa with its fifth win in six games. The Leafs also lead ninth-place New Jersey by eight points as they look to cement their first playoff berth since 2003-'04.

"It has been a while," Kessel said. "You just learn they (goals) will come eventually.

"It was an important game for us, it moved us up a couple more points up in the standings. It (playoff berth) is still far away, we still have nine games left so we have to focus on these last nine games and play well and hopefully get in."

The win was sweet redemption for Toronto, which couldn't hold a 2-0 lead against New York on Jan. 26 en route to dropping a 5-2 decision.

And they did it in dramatic fashion as New York erased a 3-1 deficit with third-period goals from Rick Nash and Derek Stepan. Stepan made it 3-3 at 9:00, converting a 2-on-1 break for his 14th of the season just as Toronto's power play expired.

But Kessel put Toronto back ahead just 39 seconds later with his 12th. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lacing on hockey skates is going to have to wait. At this point, Sidney Crosby would settle for a meal that didn't require a straw.

Crosby expects to meet with doctors later this week. "We'll see how it heals and it will be a process here the next little bit but I'm not too worried about the teeth," he said. "I'm worried about making sure I'm healed and hopefully that's sooner rather than later."

Red Sox's hot start continues at home

A second brilliant start by Clay Buchholz. A clutch homer by Daniel Nava. Another flawless fielding performance by the Boston Red Sox.

The fans at Fenway Park saw for the first time what all the excitement is about as the surprising Red Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-1 in Boston's home opener on Monday. The Red Sox improved to 5-2 for their best start in seven years.

Golf. Teen Tianlang to get pro tutorial at Masters

Guan Tianlang is in good company this week at Augusta National.

He played a practice round Monday with two-time Masters champion Ben Crenshaw, then headed out in the afternoon with Tiger Woods. He has a game lined up Tuesday with Tom Watson, an eight-time major champion. On Wednesday, he plans to play with Nick Faldo, winner of six majors.

Can't he play with someone his own age?

Not at this Masters.

Guan Tianlang THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Guan, a 14-year-old from China, is the youngest to ever play in the Masters and the youngest at any major in 148 years. He qualified by winning the Asia Pacific Amateur Championship last fall in Thailand, and now gets a crack at the best in the game on one of the most famous courses in the world. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Your mind is full of brilliant ideas. What are you going to do with them? Don't just let them sit there doing nothing. Good ideas are like fertilizer, they need to be spread around so they can help people grow.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
A new opportunity is about to come your way. Make sure you use it wisely. Yes, you will have to adapt to events that don't feel natural to you, but the effort will be worth it.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Someone will try to get you to tone down your opinions a bit today — and you must have none of it. The world needs to hear what you have to say.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You need to act tough today, even if you don't feel tough. Give employers and other important people an image of you that is strong and self-assured, even if that is far from what you actually feel.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
This is a wonderful time for you, a time of exciting adventures and encounters. You certainly won't have any reason to complain that you are bored over the next 24 hours. If anything, there will be too much going on.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You have so many options that it may get a bit too confusing. What happens over the next two or three days will nudge you in the right direction. Any choice is a good choice.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
From the look of your solar chart, it would appear that someone is hoping you will say or do something they don't have the guts to say or do themselves. You don't mind.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Don't stop to question why you are following a certain course of action. The fact that you have begun means you need to go all the way, regardless of whether your initial choice was right or wrong. Just do it.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
You are proud of your openness to new ideas but one idea you encounter today may be a bit too much for you. Does it make you feel uncomfortable that an unpleasant belief may be true?

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
It seems you have something to say that is likely to hurt the feelings of more sensitive sorts. Say it anyway because someone has to tell the truth.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Spend time with friends today because they can help you get past the negative thoughts you've been having of late. You've done so much for them that they will jump at the chance to repay your kindness.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
What happens today will make it clear where you stand with certain people and why your association is unlikely to last. Not all relationships stand the test of time. Move on to better things. SALLY BROMPTON
